WARNING ISSUED ON CARC PAINT

We recently received the following warning from the Roscommon Equipment Center (REC) regarding CARC paint. REC advised that the CARC paint has been used on military vehicles since the early 1970's (camouflage or desert storm paints). Exposure to vapors mist, dust or fumes from CARC paint can cause health problems such as itching, swelling of extremities, eye irritation, or damage to the nervous system, kidney or liver. The coatings may be fatal if swallowed. The primary compounds associated with this potential hazard are trivalent chrome, lead and cobalt zinc hexamethylene discocyanite. Proper respirators should be used when sanding or torch cutting materials that are coated with this paint. These activities often warrant the use of respirators regardless of the paint type. Generally you can determine if a military vehicle has CARC paint by applying acetone to a clean cloth and rubbing the area for ten seconds, letting it set for about one minute, then repeat. If the paint comes off, it is not CARC.
